

Neuroscience, Psychopharmacology and Psychoanalysis #27
6 March 2004

Précis

Marcia Kaplan presented a splendidly organized discussion of the neuroscientific literature on depression. Both her paper and the slides that accompanied it were already so succinct that no summary could do it justice. Perhaps with Marcia's permission, Carmen could distribute copies of the slides.

I would suggest to Marcia that she submit the material for publication as a review of the current status of the neuroscientific study of depression.